Award Recognizes Excellence in New Construction Homes Over 3,000 sq. ft.

Las Vegas, NV – September 18th 2025 – Casa Blanca Studio is proud to announce it has been named Interior Designer of the Year – New Construction Homes Over 3,000 sq. ft. by the Interior Design Society. This prestigious award honors the studio's design excellence, with a spotlight on a recent project: a 4,700-square-foot modern residence in Las Vegas.

Designed with restraint and intentionality, the home exemplifies Casa Blanca Studio's signature approach to desert living. Every detail – from the flowing spatial layout to the material selections – reflects a balance of sophistication and ease. The kitchen, a centerpiece of the home, combines sleek modern surfaces with thoughtful functionality. The primary bedroom and bathroom offer a serene retreat, where natural light and proportion create spaces that are simultaneously calming and elevated.

“This home embodies our philosophy that true luxury is found in clarity and intentionality,” says Brenda Geler, principal designer of Casa Blanca Studio. “Our goal was to create spaces that feel modern, timeless, and intimately connected to the desert environment – where every room offers both beauty and purpose.”

The award highlights Casa Blanca Studio's dedication to crafting residences that resonate with both artistry and practicality, solidifying its reputation as a leading voice in modern luxury interior design.
